The Miller Conference on Radiation Chemistry is an international meeting devoted to all aspects of Radiation Chemistry Research and Applications. It is held every two years and gathers scientists and technologists from all over the world, providing an important opportunity to exchange ideas between people with different backgrounds and to foster the professional growth of both early career and experienced researchers.

On the eve of the conference there will be a drinks reception to welcome guests from around the globe.

ABOUT THE EVENT

The aim of the Miller Conference is to have the best and most inspirational speakers and moderators that can stimulate the audience with their views on emerging research fields as well as with compelling questions that the scientific community should address.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

The event will attract individuals and organisations that are already or set to play a key role in emerging research fields in radiation chemistry and its applications. This will include scientists, graduates, students, technologists and researchers from around the world.

WHY SPONSOR AND EXHIBIT?

The Miller Conference 2019 will provide value to its sponsors and exhibitors by:

- Supporting the development and maintenance of research in radiation chemistry
- Showcasing the activity the worldwide sector is undertaking to attract and retain skills in the sector
- Demonstrating key sponsors' position as a leader in radiation chemistry and its application
- Fostering the professional growth of both early career and experience researchers
- Provides a portal to major budget holders who purchase scientific and/or analytical equipment
